

Today's teens are exposed to challenging ideas and issues that cause them to question their faith and the foundations of American culture. Many of these issues trouble their minds, and offend their spirit, but studying them in the context of Christian foundations, true science, and sound thought can help them build resolve. Many offensive ideas are finding their way into public policy, creating pressures that force our people to conform to that which is hostile to our beliefs and common sense. Students need to know how to evaluate these ideas in the context of a Christian world view. Students will develop critical thinking, writing, and communication skills; increase in knowledge; and learn how to interpret current events (including news and information) to apply wisdom in making choices as engaged citizens. Tuition is $265, and includes all materials.

Mr. Racer develops each lesson from original sources and does not use a specific textbook or set of books. Students will read articles, studies, book snippets, papers, and more, that Mr. Racer assigns.
