

Learn the skills you need to get a job as a graphic designer for a small business, church, non-profit, or your own start-up business!

Learn the fundamentals of graphic design and build a professional e-portfolio in this free-form, low-anxiety class that caters especially to the unique talents and learning types of each student. Start with the basics, learn in just two semesters what would take you ten years of self-teaching, and leave class with everything you need to start your career in graphic design--or just be that much better at creating graphic projects for personal and volunteer use.

Over the course of two semesters, you will complete a professional graphic design project and create an e-portfolio to market yourself to potential employers and networking connections. Portfolio projects include developing your marketing/branding strategy, a digital design project, brochure, ad, and business card.

The class expectations, weekly hours, and assignments will be arranged in partnership between you and your teacher to help you achieve your project goals, desired credit hours, and skill development. This class is meant to fit into your existing schedule, no matter how full!
